In February 1868 Benjamin Disraeli became the fortieth prime minister of Great Britain. The tenth volume of the Benjamin Disraeli Letters series is devoted exclusively to Disraeli's copious correspondence during that momentous year. The volume contains 648 of Disraeli's letters, 510 of them never before published and all copiously annotated — often with the other side of the correspondence included. This volume constitutes a unique record of Disraeli's rise to power and of the inner workings of the Victorian political scene, all of it recorded in intimate detail. A vast project which the Times Literary Supplement has called "a monument to scholarship," the Benjamin Disraeli Letters volumes are an essential resource for the study of nineteenth-century politics, history, literature, and the arts.

Civil Aeronautics Board Reports Forgotten Books

Excerpt from Letter to George Carr Glyn, Esq., M. P., Chairman of the London and North Western Railway Company One of the latest is addressed to yourself. The previous occupation of the writer, as Secretary of the South Eastern Railway Company, and the acquaintance with the Arcana of Railway management which such a position implies, invest this publication with rather more importance than usually attaches to similar brochures while the dogmatical spirit in which it is written, may lead a reader, unacquainted with the subject, to attach a weight to the opinions expressed in it which they do not deserve. The fallacies contained in this letter have indeed been reproduced from time to time in various forms, and the present attempt contains nothing that has not been frequently asserted, and as often repelled; as, however, the excitement now existing in regard to every department of Railway Executive may lend currency to the views of the writer, it may be useful to consider one or two of the points in this pamphlet. Such an examination need not be long, and my avocations forbid my doing more than touching lightly on the more salient points raised by this gentleman. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Excerpt from Life and Letters of Sir Richard Claverhouse Jebb, O. M., Litt; D It now remains my pleasant duty to thank warmly Mr J. D. Duff of Trinity, who has most kindly and carefully gone through my proofs with me page by page, giving me much friendly and valued criticism, and Mr

S. H. Butcher, who after reading the first type-written chapters gave me encouragement to go on with the more difficult part. Thanks are also due to the Rev. Dr Denney and Mr R. P. G. Williamson for their interesting recollections of Sir Richard Jebb as a teacher, and to the many friends who sent me letters. Whether or not these could be fitted into the fabric of the book, it was a great pleasure to me to read them. And I wish also to thank Mr R. T. Wright for the interest he has shown in the progress of the book and for his advice on technical points. Indeed all the officials at the Pitt Press have been most patient with my ignorance which must often have given them needless trouble. For nothing in the Life and Letters is Dr Verrall responsible. He has not yet seen them. I felt it the very greatest kindness and a great point gained when he consented to write the chapter on my husband's work as critic and scholar.
