 In the fifty years between 1530 and 1580, England moved from being one of the most lavishly Catholic countries in Europe to being a Protestant nation, a land of whitewashed churches and antipapal preaching. What was the impact of this religious change in the countryside? And how did country people feel about the revolutionary upheavals that transformed their mental and material worlds under Henry VIII and his three children? In this book a reformation historian takes us inside the mind and heart of Morebath, a remote and tiny sheep farming village on the southern edge of Exmoor. The bulk of Morebath's conventional archives have long since vanished. But from 1520 to 1574, through nearly all the drama of the English Reformation, Morebath's only priest, Sir Christopher Trychay, kept the parish accounts on behalf of the churchwardens. Opinionated, eccentric, and talkative, Sir Christopher filled these vivid scripts for parish meetings with the names and doings of his parishioners. Through his eyes we catch a rare glimpse of the life and pre-Reformation piety of a sixteenth-century English village. The book also offers a unique window into a rural world in crisis as the Reformation progressed. Sir Christopher Trychay's accounts provide direct evidence of the motives which drove the hitherto law-abiding West-Country communities to participate in the doomed Prayer-Book Rebellion of 1549 culminating in the siege of Exeter that ended in bloody defeat and a wave of executions. Its church bells confiscated and silenced, Morebath shared in the punishment imposed on all the towns and villages of Devon and Cornwall. Sir Christopher documents the changes in the community, reluctantly Protestant and increasingly preoccupied with the secular demands of the Elizabethan state, the equipping of armies, and the payment of taxes. Morebath's priest, garrulous to the end of his days, describes a rural world irrevocably altered and enables us to hear the voices of his villagers after four hundred years of silence.

 In The Christian Man, Patrick Morley-- bestselling author of The Man in the Mirror—offers men practical ways to deal with life's problems and become the men of God they aspire to be. No man fails on purpose. Quite the opposite. When our feet hit the floor every morning, we're looking for a win. But these are turbulent times to be a man. In gathering material for this book, Morley interviewed many men. Their input was powerful. And transparent. They agreed that it's increasingly difficult to juggle all their responsibilities as men, husbands, fathers, friends, workers, churchmen, and citizens. No one understands what you're going through more than men's expert Patrick Morley, author of the landmark bestseller The Man in the Mirror, which has sold over 4 million copies. And now, Morley has put together a game plan so you can get that win you're looking for. The Christian Man is filled with powerful stories and refreshingly practical answers to questions like: How can I lead a more balanced life? How can I have a deeper walk with God? What makes a great husband? How can I become a dad who makes a difference? How should I think about my work? What's the right way to deal with lust? By the end of this must-read book, you will know how to intentionally release the power of God on the issues that matter most to you. You'll be able to walk with confidence in the one identity that matters most: The Christian Man.

The true worth of this planet is light. You are that light. There are four voices in your head that vie for the light you are, to stifle or enlarge its flame: One voice for planning and reasoning. One voice as the Creator joins the flame of His Spirit to His spark in you, providing you His peace and joy in relationship as your light grows. One voice for the enemy's attacks, deceptive trans-dimensional efforts to entangle you in a scheme to have your light go out, part of a spirit-war that's underway. One voice designed to bring anxiety, part of an outdated survival plan we have, meant to be unplugged once we become aware of it. Its functioning interferes with our peace and the enemy need launch few attacks on us while this voice maintains its strength. This fourth voice has its origin in what Saint Paul refers to as "the natural man." It is hidden and perfidious in its methods of control, maintaining its work from behind a veil, totally unrecognized --- until its mystery is understood. The mystery of the Voice of the Natural Man is one we are meant to solve. It is that adventure to which I invite you now. Suppose a Hermit and a woman have a talk: "We are spirit into matter pressed," the Hermit says. "Then matter takes control. Puts a veil on the heart so it cannot hear." They sit silent a while before the woman speaks. "How shall the heart hear?" The Hermit turns to her. "The teacher stands at the heart's door and knocks to be let in. Shall noise prevent your hearing that?" "Though I'm intending it be heard?" "If intention does its part the heart shall hear, for the veil of noise to be set aside so that the sky appears. And you may be ready to intend that, yes, but for one thing." "What?" "Your intention has been commandeered. Your will is not your own. Not the true will you brought to Earth with you when you were born." "Commandeered how?" "Ah." The Hermit grins. "Puzzle that, and the wind will calm, the sun appear, the silence will be yours, to better hear the Creator's voice. And this you'll have as well: The control you're meant to have in the inner life, that you never knew you lost." Join us on the Four Voices adventure, for every part of the conversation you just read to make total sense.

Margaret Earle, a young school teacher accidentally gets down on a wrong platform and finds herself lost in the wilderness of Arizona. Alone and helpless, she pins her hope on a man to help her but it soon backfires and Margaret finds herself running away in sheer desperation. But what will happen when her path will cross with Lance Gardley, the handsome cowboy? Grace Livingston Hill (1865–1947) was an early 20th-century novelist and wrote both under her real name and the pseudonym Marcia Macdonald. Hill's messages in her works are simple in nature: good versus evil. As Hill believed that the Bible was very clear about what was good and evil in life and had firm faith God's ability to restore everything, the same belief was also reflected in her own works. Hill's novels are widely read and appreciated for their romance and their inspiring life lessons.

'Barakat isn't writing about 'the immigrant'. She's writing about the human.' Rumaan Alam, author of Leave the World Behind Shortlisted for the Saif Ghobash Banipal Prize for Arabic Translation * Longlisted for the DUBLIN Literary Award, 2022 Winner of the International Prize for Arabic Fiction, a devastating story of displacement, war, and the unlikely glimmer of hope in the dark In an unnamed country torn apart by war, six strangers are compelled to share their darkest secrets. Taking pen to paper, each attempts to put in writing what they can't bring themselves to say to the person they love – mother, father, brother, lost love. Their words form a chain of dark confessions, none of which reaches the intended recipient. But their consequences will ripple through other lives, affecting strangers in ways the writers could never have anticipated... Luminous and haunting, Voices of the Lost tells the moving story of characters living on the periphery, battling displacement, poverty, and the demons within themselves. From one of today's most talented Arabic writers, this is the story of lives intimately woven together in a society that is tearing itself apart. Mademoiselle Mathilde: a Novel Xulon Press

This book provides scriptural references to several voices we commonly experience everyday. Thinking there is only one voice leaves us alone listening to a single source of information. You will discover there are four voices from which to choose. We are not limited to hearing only one, but can gather tremendous wisdom as we learn to discover the different sources and the purpose for each voice. As you read this book I believe you will understand that the Bible is alive and more than words written on paper. You will find it provides a voice of wisdom and guidance - providing instruction that produces good solutions. Our tendency is to be led by our inner voice based on our accumulated information. As we expand our understanding more information will allow for making better decisions. The bible provides evidence showing the four voices available to us today and how to identify each. Doug Poole began writing after retirement. His lifetime of experiencing God led him to reveal how the Lord has worked throughout his life. Applying biblical Scriptures has resulted in life examples giving him insight that he has compiled into several books. His first marriage of 42 years reveals years of learning that caused him to grow in the Lord and expand his understanding. Writing what he has learned is carried on to inspire all his writings and application of practical information. Now remarried, his continued learning has become apparent by the results evident in his life. Learning to implement some of God's many principles is an experience in itself. You will discover that separating the four voices has been instrumental in finding the whole truth in what he has learned. His accumulated knowledge has revealed that mixing godly wisdom with worldly information are two opposing sources when choosing the best decision.

Experiences of hearing the voice of God (or angels, demons, or other spiritual beings) have generally been understood either as religious experiences or else as a feature of mental illness. Some critics of traditional religious faith have dismissed the visions and voices attributed to biblical characters and saints as evidence of mental disorder. However, it is now known that many ordinary people, with no other evidence of mental disorder, also hear voices and that these voices not infrequently include spiritual or religious content. Psychological and interdisciplinary research has shed a revealing light on these experiences in recent years, so that we now know much more about the phenomenon of "hearing voices" than ever before. The present work considers biblical, historical, and scientific accounts of spiritual and mystical experiences of voice hearing in the Christian tradition in order to explore how some voices may be understood theologically as revelatory. It is proposed that in the incarnation, Christian faith finds both an understanding of what it is to be fully human (a theological anthropology), and God's perfect self-disclosure (revelation). Within such an understanding, revelatory voices represent a key point of interpersonal encounter between human beings and God.

In his first book since the enormously popular Great Singers on Great Singing, the distinguished Metropolitan Opera basso Jerome Hines here provides a wealth of new information and advice for all those who have embarked on - or plan to embark on - a serious singing career. From basic information on how the head and body combine to produce vocal sound, he goes on to analyze the "four voices" encompassed by the singer's one voice, always explaining how through proper technique and training that voice can achieve its ultimate in power, grace and beauty. On another level, Mr. Hines guides the singer through the labyrinth of choosing the right teacher, shows how physical and emotional health and care of the body relate to the vocal apparatus and considers such diverse matters as stage fright, dealing with conductors and managers and that final challenge - facing the critics.

The Four Voices of Man

The author studied at Penn State, where he played no football, and Iowa, where he skirted the Workshop. He found God, lysergic acid, and despair in the Sixties, survived by getting that era into his art-some nineteen novels, twelve verse plays and more poetry than Browning. The Will to Christ contains ambition, a paean to bipolar disorder, four dramatic monologues by major players in the genesis and termination of the only messiah he's known, poetry on a sustained level that is often frightening. While the author has two other books and over a hundred poems in print, another ninety wouldn't offer a tenth of what this great long-poem rewards in continued reading.

Here is an epic, twenty-two years in the making, that summons even Milton. The latter would be clearly horrified.
