The Indian Listener (fortnightly programme journal of AIR in English) published by The Indian State Broadcasting Service, Bombay, started on 22 December, 1935 and was the successor to the Indian Radio Times in English, which was published beginning in July 16 of 1927. From 22 August, 1937 onwards, it was published by All India Radio, New Delhi. In 1950, it was turned into a weekly journal. Later, The Indian Listener became "Akashvani" in January 5, 1958. It was made a fortnightly again on July 1, 1983. It used to serve the listener as a Bradshaw of broadcasting, and give listener the useful information in an interesting manner about programmes, who writes them, take part in them and produce them along with photographs of performing artists. It also contains the information of major changes in the policy and service of the organisation. It brings me immense pleasure to offer this book to music lovers who wish to learn and appreciate Indian Classical Music. Compositions used in this book originate in Devanagari script and would usually be sung in Hindi or Brijj-bhasha. For this book, all these Compositions are translated into English. I embarked on my teaching journey in the UK, initially providing my students with regular handouts that outlined diverse notations. However, as time progressed, I became aware of the necessity for a concise and comprehensible handbook, that serves as an optimal study reference, particularly for examinations.

Theory of Indian Music ALL YUVA

Vallabhacharya, the founder of the Pushti Maarg was a poet, scholar and passionate lover of Lord Krishna. Madhurashtakam is one of the immemorial compositions of Vallabhacharya, the founder of Pusti marg. These set of eight verses talk of Shri Krishna's bewitching personality. His pastimes, and His pranks all of which make Him loving and lovable. The composition has become more popular because of its simplicity. Pujya Guruji's commentary on it gives us a sense of immediacy with highlights of episodes from the lives of recent saints. It also makes us introspect on our hypocrisies which prevent us from flowing with sweetness. It opens our eyes to the healing energies of the Divine, clothed in a name and form.

Bhajans and Kirtans perform the act of connecting the three, the body, mind and soul together with the divine. Some people feel that their raga is not good, so they do not sing bhajans, but if they believe in God, then I would like to tell them that singing bhajan requires no emotion or raga. If bhajan is added to the kirtan, then automatically the pleasure and divine feeling begins. Rajkot Gurukul

This book contains the reports given at the Eighth Bhakti Conference' organized in Leuven in August 2000. Forty scholars came to Leuven, hailing from fourteen different countries -- from Japan to the west coast of the United States -- each one bringing his or her expertise and experience. Nearly all the reports are published here. In addition, another twenty scholars sent a report or their list of publications. The result is a fascinating overview of the very wide field that Bhakti studies have become, with a list of 1162 books and articles, and reports about Bengali, Braj, Gujarati, Marathi, Punjabi and Rajasthani literature, lexicography, musicology, Santa literature, Sikhism, Gorakhanath, Kabir, Krishna Bhakti, Lalan Fakir, Mirabai, Ramananda, Surdas, Tulsidas, and many other topics of research. A detailed index makes all this matter easily accessible.

 This research focuses on the contexts: historical, socio-cultural, spiritual, and musical in which the devotional songs called Sai Bhajan had emerged from. Since around 1960, it has evolved into a distinctive vocal genre from South India. Based on these contexts, selected specific areas of Sai Bhajan are scrutinized and analyzed to reveal the inner workings of structure, patterns, formats and practices. The scope of this study is a contextual exploratory into the complexity of a musical world phenomenon. Inherently, a multi-disciplinary framework is utilized for a more comprehensive outcome that also includes 108 original transcriptions adapting into the western staff notation for Sai Bhajan songs, all of which derived from the vast extensive repertoire within the Indian oral tradition.
