These poems were written starting in 1990 during the author's days in college at the University of Florida. The collection has expanded over the years. They were written as a release of thoughts about things going on at the university as well as globally. They capture the times well and give a pulse of things happening in society. Dark Visions is divided into three parts. The first part is a series of poems that make up one epic horror vision. The second part is a series of poems for the Apocalypse. Though dark in nature, many are also amusing and offer a sense of motivation and hope. Part three is a compilation of dedication poems. They were dedicated to individuals, groups and things both tangible and intangible. These poems were written as motivational poems to those requesting them. Dark Visions, overall, is a compilation of some of the author's best and favorite poems that were written over the last twenty-two years. You are invited to enter the author's mind, dwell in these poems, reflect on them and enjoy them on a daily basis.

Sarah Roberts has a unique problem. Routine blackouts occur to her on a random basis. What's different about her temporary unconsciousness is she wakes to various notes written by her own hand. These notes are prophecies. Dark Visions. Future events with dire circumstances. Circumstances that she can avert, for Sarah is what they call an Automatic Writer. The novel begins with Sarah perched under a bridge with no idea why she's there, except what the note said; Sit under the Elizabeth St. Bridge at 10:18am. Bring hammer. There's a car accident on the bridge, plunging a vehicle into the river below. If Sarah wasn't there at the right time, with the hammer to force her way into the car, people would've died. The novel's intensity increases as more blackouts occur, causing her to note them down. Her next task is to avert a kidnapping. She's done it before. Couldn't be that hard. But on this one, the kidnapers recognize her and nab her instead of their intended victim. People are killed. Witnesses place Sarah at the scene. The police find her notebook riddled with prophecies of accidents and crimes. They want answers. They want to know how she has such information. All this happens while the eighteen year old star in this first novel of a trilogy suffers from trichotillomania, which means she's a puller. Most of her hair is missing. The story has numerous twists and turns and finally ends with a massive climax and a lead in to The Warning, which is Part

Two of this trilogy. Overall a great read, combining the likes of John Saul, and Dean Koontz.

For years E.R. Vernor, better known by his pen name, Corvis Nocturnum, has been illustrating book covers, catalogs, bands CD covers and has had work in Julie Strain's Nightmare on Pinup Street. Now, collected here is a glimpse of the art itself, but various never before seen images of the works in progress and the artists background and thoughts behind the works themselves. From the introduction by Joseph Vargo: "The imagery that is depicted in the art of Corvis Nocturnum is at times surreal, stark and unsettling, yet there is an underlying beauty to be found within each painting. As a writer, Corvis boldly strives to shed light on the dark subcultures of the world and his libertine attitude carries over into his artwork, which unflinchingly examines similar taboo topics. Unrestricted by conventional boundaries, his Satanic and erotic themes truly embrace the darkness within his soul. His artwork mixes traditional gothic elements such as ravens and vampires with fallen angels and S&M vixens to create raw impressions of a dark and unadulterated realm."

Jane and her tired companions seek only refuge from a thick, mysterious fog, but someone has darker plans for them. Those plans lead them to the burnt-out remains of an old building complex where the past doesn't lie peacefully below the surface. Jane somehow feels drawn to the strange place with its air of dark mystery and is compelled to touch the ruins. The next thing they know the charred remains vanish and they stand in the middle of a pristine garden. They're also surrounded by fox shifters bearing weapons and old-fashioned garb. A pointed question reveals that the group has been thrown back in time some one thousand years to just before the complex was destroyed. As Jane learns more about the past and grows to care about the many lives under the roof of the grand house, she's faced with a daunting dilemma. The past has already been written, but might they rewrite those events? And if they change the past, what will happen to their future? Will they remain trapped in the past forever, or worse, cease to exist at all? And yet even with those dangers, can she stand by and watch so many kind souls perish in the tragedy that is destined to come? KEYWORDS: new adult, mystery, paranormal, supernatural, fantasy, folklore, folktale, folk tale, legend, legends, myth, myths, action adventure, action, adventure, second chances, comedy, humor, horror, free, freebie, free book, free books, book, books, free ebook, ebook, free novel, rich, quick read, read, short, serial, series, college, funny, female protagonist, novel, secret, suspense, thriller, alpha male, literature, story, stories, hero, fiction, box, box set, boxed, boxed

Los Angeles is an ideal city for film noir for both economic and aesthetic reasons. The largest metropolitan area in the country, home to an ever-changing population of the disillusioned and in close proximity to city, mountains, ocean, and desert, the City of Angels became a center of American film noir. This detailed discussion of nine films explores such topics as why certain settings are appropriate for film noir, why L.A. has been a favorite of authors such as Raymond Chandler, and relevant political developments in the area. The films are also examined in terms of story content as well as how they developed in the project stage. Utilizing a number of quotes from interviews, the work examines actors, directors, and others involved with the films, touching on their careers and details of their time in L.A. The major films covered are The Big Sleep, Criss Cross, D.O.A., In A Lonely Place, The Blue Gardenia, Kiss Me Deadly, The Killing, Chinatown, and L.A. Confidential.
